

Judy Beck is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Physics and Astronomy at UNC Asheville, where she teaches a variety of courses in physics, astronomy, and special topics. She engages in science outreach for schools, teachers, and the general public, advises the Society of Physics Students club at UNCA, and works with student docents at Lookout Observatory. Judy has also taught physics and astronomy to university students in La Serena, Chile, and to Buddhist monks at the Sera Mey Monastery in Bylakuppe, India. Closer to home, Judy is a longtime member of the Astronomy Club of Asheville, and particularly appreciates the collaborative relationship between the Club and the University, and of all the contributions that the Club makes to the community.
