

Dr. Donald Collins, Professor Emeritus – Warren Wilson College, taught physics and astronomy for 41 years at Warren Wilson College emphasizing “hands-on” techniques in both physics and astronomy. Since retirement he has built a “roll-off roof” observatory that he has used to photograph a number of deep sky objects, and contributed research through extensive observations of variable stars. He has concentrated on cataclysmic variable stars (CV’s).

